A $3,000 SHORTAGE

Said to Exist in the Late James W. Gray's Book Accounts.

Julius J. D. McNamar, by Whom Gray was for Years Employed, Makes Statement to the Advocate This Afternoon—A Sensational Development—Examination of Books.

A painful surprise to the many friends of the late James W. Gray, who died July 23, 1901, very suddenly while sitting in his chair, to learn that his accounts at the McNamar Machine Works, have recently been investigated, and a shortage of over $3,000 is alleged to have been discovered.

Mr. Gray was a leading member of the Baptist church of this city and prominent in the A O U W and Royal Arcanum circles. He was a man of learning and refinement, and no man in the community held a better reputation for honesty and fair dealing than "Jim" Gray. Indeed had it been desired to fill a position demanding just such strict integrity, James W. Gray's name would have been considered by those wishing a man possessing these qualifications. He is dead and cannot be harmed by the alleged exposure of his betrayal of a trust, while all sympathize with the widow and innocent children who will have to bear the contumely attached to the memory of a husband and father who through no fault of theirs, left them such a heritage.

An Advocate reporter called at the McNamar Machine shop this afternoon and was told by Mr. Julius McNamar, the story of the transactions which led to the discovery and final exposure of Gray's alleged faithlessness.

Mr. McNamar said:

"Last summer I told Gray that I would like to go away about August and as he was behind in his work I wanted him to get 'caught up' so that I might leave everything in his good hands. After first calling his attention to the matter I waited a few weeks and again asked him if he had gotten his work up. He had not and I grew impatient, but not until later did I even suspect anything criminal in his procrastination, but at last the suspicion forced itself upon me. The next time I spoke to him about the books must be straightened up; that I was going to have an expert examine them, and wanted him to have a

MR. A. J. JONES DIES IN CHICAGO

Went to Receive Treatment at a Sanitarium.

Arm Bitten by a Pet Mastiff Caused Him Trouble—Brief Dispatch Announcing Death.

Mr. A. J. Jones one of the oldest and best engineers on the B & O. railroad left for Chicago Monday evening where he expected to enter the Pasteur Institute for treatment for threatened hydrophobia. He was accompanied by his son, Thomas Jones, a B. & O. machinist, and Dr. C. F. Legge.

Last fall Mr. Jones was bitten by a pet mastiff which afterwards developed rabies. The wound was cauterized and appeared to properly heal in a healthy manner.

Lately the arm where he was bitten, became very painful and swelled to an abnormal size. Dr. C. F. Legge treated the arm, and finally advised Mr. Jones to go to Chicago for treatment.

Mr. Jones was much discouraged over his condition, but the doctor was of opinion that he was probably suffering from a nervous condition brought on by worry since he was bitten.

At the Pasteur Institute, no opinion was given as to whether or not Mr. Jones was suffering from hydrophobia. They said that they did not attempt to cure the disease at all, and he was taken to a private sanitarium.

A brief telegram was received here this afternoon announcing Mr. Jones' death at Chicago this morning. The remains will arrive tonight on B & O No. 8.

FORTY MEMBERS

Of the Builders' Exchange Met Tuesday Evening and Enjoyed a Social Session.

About 40 members of the Builders and Traders' Exchange met Tuesday evening in the room, 33 1/2 West Main street, and enjoyed a social session, a fine "Dutch lunch" being served. The front room of the exchange will soon be fitted up and samples of all kinds of building material will be on exhibition, as well as samples of steel roofing, malleable, etc. Mr. Fred H. Carlisle the secretary, will be in the room all day and will be pleased to show and explain the exhibits at all times.

Grocer Murdered.

Chicago, April 23.—Two hold up men today shot and killed Peter Salski, a grocer, and fatally wounded his son, Julius, who shot one of them. He was afterwards captured.

Overcome By Heat.

Pittsburg, April 23.—Balasus Sescusan, employed in the Carnegie Steel mill at Braddock, was overcome by heat yesterday and died today.

ODD FELLOWS—Tuesday was a red letter day in the history of Newark Odd Fellowship, there being a very large attendance at the district meeting. Saturday's lodge column will report the meeting at length.

WEDDING—George Anderson, son of Mr. Charles Anderson, of Union Station, and Miss Katie Harworth, daughter of Mr. George Harworth of this city, were married this morning. Squire Atcherly officiating.

LARGEST RAID

In New York's History When 350 People in 14 Resorts Were Captured.

New York, April 23.—The largest police raid in the history of the city occurred last night when, with 204 policemen and 14 patrol wagons, Police Inspector Cross marched into the "red light" district and captured 350 men and women from fourteen disorderly resorts. The prisoners were held without bail. This is said to be the forerunner of a spirited police campaign against vice on the east side.

OF WHIGVILLE WIPED OFF THE MAP BY FIRE

OTHER SECTIONS VISITED BY DISASTROUS FIRES.

Wind Carried Sparks from One Burning House to Another—Reports From Various Places.

Cadwell, Ohio, April 23.—The village of Whigville, 14 miles east of this place, was almost entirely wiped from the face of the earth last evening by a fire which originated in the office of Dr. John Hunter while a heavy gale was blowing.

The flames communicated to the surrounding property and a large tobacco house across the alley was enveloped, as was the residence of H. F. Groves, and all were consumed. J. B. Sharling's store and residence were next destroyed. From here the flames leaped across the street, and the store and residence of J. L. Gulick and the postoffice were soon afire.

Dr. Hunter's and Hugh Petty's residences were next consumed. Then followed the burning of the residences of James Bridgeman and Mrs. Zighland Barnes, from which none of the household goods were saved. Then came the destruction of Charles Speckle's and W. H. Craig's residences, and the occupants are homeless.

The loss is estimated at $25,000 with a small amount of insurance. There were left in the village after the conflagration only the B. & Z. railroad station and the Methodist church, which were some distance from the village. The town was without means of fighting fire, which soon got beyond control of the few inhabitants and they were forced to stand helplessly by and see their homes and business places go up in smoke.

A Forest Fire.

Scottsville, Ky., April 23.—Fire broke out in the forest near Wildwood causing much damage.

Several Houses Burned.

Decatur, Ind., April 23.—Fire has destroyed the home of P. Mazelin, David Habbegger, John McLain and Jas. McCune, south of town. Wind carried sparks from one house to another.

Town Almost Destroyed.

Goshen, Ind., April 23.—The town of Wolfe Lake was almost destroyed by fire last night. The blaze began early in the afternoon in a marsh west of town.

Rain Saved Plymouth.

Bourbon, Ind., April 23.—Heavy rains last night saved Plymouth from being totally destroyed by fire. Twenty-five houses burned.

Further Details From Plymouth.

Rochester, Ind., April 23.—Plymouth, a town of four thousand inhabitants, 20 miles north of here, was almost totally destroyed by fire late Tuesday afternoon. The fire caught from a spark from a locomotive and a high wind carried the flames. Many residences, the electric light plant and several business houses were destroyed; loss $50,000.

Tire's Fiery Blaze.

Bloomville, O., April 23.—The village of Tire was visited by a fierce fire yesterday. Three houses were burned and many slightly damaged.

Southern Town Visited.

Carrollton, Miss., April 23.—The business section of North Carrollton has been destroyed by fire.

COL. KILBOURNE

Declines to be a Candidate for Congress from 12th District—Retires from Politics.

Columbus, O., April 23.—Col. James Kilbourne of Columbus, the late Democratic candidate for Governor, has refused to be a candidate for Congress from the Twelfth district and will announce his retirement from politics in a formal letter this week.

Prices Still Higher.

Chicago, April 23.—Prices on beef, pork and mutton were still higher this morning. To add to the dismay of the consumer, butterine manufacturers today raised the price of their staple from 16 to 16 1/2 cents a pound. Another phase of the market is that soaps, oils and articles manufactured from slaughter house offal are advancing.

POTTERY TRUST

To Include All Pottery Plants West of the Alleghenies is Now Being Formed.

East Liverpool, O., April 23.—The Pottery Trust, to include all the pottery plants west of the Allegheny mountains, is in progress of formation here. It will be capitalized for several million dollars. Local manufacturers look with decided favor on the proposal submitted to them. H. I. Irwin and James G. Trainer of Chicago, are here to promoting the deal.

NEW MAYOR

Has Disappeared and Friends Fear Violence—Where Is Charles Klein.

Uhrichsville, O., April 23.—This town is excited over the disappearance of Charles Klein, the newly elected Mayor of Uhrichsville. Mr. Klein was to have been sworn into office at the Council meeting Monday night, but failed to appear.

It is said that he left town on a west-bound train, but his destination is unknown. It was thought that he might have gone to the home of his parents at Port Washington, but he has not been seen there. Many stories are afloat, and some hint at foul play. He is 35 years old and unmarried. He was elected on the Democratic ticket by a majority of 67, while the usual Republican majority is about 200.

Safe Robbed.

Clinton, Ark., April 23.—The safe in the Van Buren county court house was blown open last night and about $6000 stolen. There is no clue to the robbers.

CONVENTION

Of Indiana Republicans Opens at Indianapolis Today—Trouble Over the Trust Plank.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 23.—The Republican State convention was called to order this afternoon in Tomlinson hall. The entire Indiana congressional delegation and Senators Fairbanks and Beveridge were present among those seated on the stage. The platform committee, it was announced at noon, was still wrestling with the trust plank. It is thought that the report may be delayed because of differences in the committee. The "keystone" was founded by Senator Beveridge.

MORGAN

Worth Only a Hundred Millions But He Controls Five Billions 200 Millions.

New York, April 23.—The English and German papers continue to rave at the J. P. Morgan steamship combine and will wait for equal control in the merger. Morgan it is stated today, is not worth more than one hundred millions, but he controls capital estimated at five billions, two hundred million of dollars.

WIDOW

HOPED TO BECOME BRIDE OF CAREY B. PAUL

EVIDENCE GIVEN BY MRS. FLEMING IN COLUMBUS.

No Receipts Asked for Money Deposited as She Had Utmost Confidence in Paul.

Columbus, O., April 23.—Mrs. Mary O. Fleming, who sued the estate of Carey B. Paul, late of Delaware, Ohio, and this city, for $40,000, in a deposition gives utterance to some sensational testimony. The most interesting admission of handsome Mrs. Fleming was in reply to a question by H. J. Booth. Mrs. Fleming admitted that her relations with Mr. Paul were those of man and wife. Mr. Paul was well known in the business circles of New York.

Mrs. Fleming according to her testimony, was born, reared and married in Muskingum county. Her husband, like Mr. Paul, dealt in wool and worked a farm. A boy was born as a result of the union, and he is now a man 25 years of age, employed on a street car line at Mt. Clemens, Mich. He was mail clerk at the Chittenden Hotel, this city for a while, when Mr. Paul was President of the hotel company.

The husband of Mrs. Fleming died in 1888, leaving her a little property and $5,000 in insurance. She moved to Delaware in 1889, and not long afterward walked into the bank of which Mr. Paul was president, and was told that her husband was an old friend, a fellow wool buyer. She was there to deposit the money left by her husband. They became very friendly from the chance meeting, and Mrs. Paul frequently called upon Mrs. Fleming afterward. They grew more friendly as the days rolled by, and soon were engaged to be married. Mr. Paul being a widower and Mrs. Fleming a widow, the witness said. This was in August, 1890, but the horizon of love was not clear for Mrs. Fleming, and one night Mr. Paul intimated that Mrs. Kate Brown, so Mrs. Fleming testified, had threatened to bring a breach of promise suit and file a serious charge against him unless he married her immediately. This of course was depressing news to Mrs. Fleming, but she stood it nobly, and Mr. Paul married Mrs. Brown. Paul told Mrs. Fleming, so Mrs. Fleming testified, that his wife had entrapped him.

Mr. Paul was not going to win Mrs. Fleming's affections and then recklessly cast them aside, without compensating her in some way, so he presented her with $65,000 worth of Government bonds, she claimed. Her confidence in the world and its people was so great that without hesitancy she carried the bonds to her writing desk and deposited them safely. They remained there, she alleged, until Mr. Paul explained the great danger of their being stolen. Consequently Mrs. Fleming acted upon his suggestion, and the bonds were deposited in the bank of which Mr. Paul was the head.

Mrs. Fleming was asked if it was not a fact that she told several persons that the bonds came into her possession in Chicago. Mrs. Fleming admitted, he had told the story that a very rich man, whom she had known, was aware that his hours on earth were few, and he sent for Mrs. Fleming. On his deathbed he turned the

FUNSTON CALLED DOWN.

Kansan Today Reprimanded by the President for Talking Too Much.

The General Had Said Senator Hoar Was "Afflicted With an Overheated Conscience"—Approval of the President On General Chaffee's Policy.

Washington, April 23.—Brig. General Fred Funston has been officially reprimanded by the President for saying further public discussion of the Philippine question.

GENERAL FRED FUNSTON.

The following letter to Funston was made public this morning:

"I am directed by the President to instruct you that he wishes you to cease further public discussion of the situation in the Philippines and also to express his regret that you should make a Senator of the United States the object of public criticism or discussion. Very respectfully,

"WM. CARY SANGER,
"Acting Secretary of War."

Chaffee's Policy Approved
Washington, April 23.—President Roosevelt today put the stamp of his approval on the policy being pursued by General Chaffee with reference to the Moros in the island of Mindanao. The President instructs General Chaffee that if his demands for the surrender of the Moro murderers are not complied with, he is to "act upon the lines that in his judgment will best serve to bring about peace and order in the island of Mindanao."

BOY BURNED

Before the Eyes of Friends Who Were Unable to Save Him at Mansfield, Ohio.

Mansfield, O., April 23.—Wm. Logsdon, aged 18, who worked for the Wilcox Dye Works, was in the basement yesterday afternoon when 20 gallons of gasoline exploded. The fire spread so rapidly that he was unable to escape. The scene was heartrending when Logsdon stood in front of a small window begging to be extricated and his friends could not get to him. He perished before their eyes. While trying to rescue him Grant Wilcox was badly burned.

STRIKERS

Resort to Violence and Engage in a Conflict with the Police Today at Paterson.

Faterson, N. J., April 23.—A strike is on in the silk works here, 1190 dyers demanding $11 instead of $9 a week. A mob last night threw one of the proprietors Mr. Bailey, into a vat of dye. He was badly burned. Property was damaged.

Dyers' helpers today again resorted to violence. They attacked two mills and engaged in a battle with the police. Shots were exchanged, and two officers were wounded. More trouble is feared.

REPUBLICANS

Select Cleveland and May 27 and 28 as the Time and Place for Holding Convention.

Columbus, April 23.—The Republican state central committee today decided to hold the state convention at Cleveland Tuesday and Wednesday May 27 and 28. Columbus refused to extend the usual courtesies and was turned down by a vote of 17 to 4.

Cuban Reciprocity.

Washington April 23.—The majority of the Republican Senators held a meeting yesterday afternoon to consider the Cuban reciprocity question. They will act together in the formulating of a substitute for the House bill and none of them are to co-operate with the Democratic members of the committee.

EXPEDITION SUFFERED MUCH

THE EXPLORERS ENCOUNTERED AWFUL WEATHER.

Was 63 degrees Below Zero—Expected to Arrive in America in April via Behring Strait.

London, April 23.—Letters were received here from Harry DeWindt, the leader of the expedition which is attempting to make its way overland from Paris to New York, date Verkhoyansk, East Siberia, at the end of February.

In spite of the forebodings of the officials at Yakutsk, who strongly urged Mr. DeWindt not to continue his journey, saying the conditions were worse this year than ever the expedition reached Verkhoyansk, 500 miles north of Yakutsk, February 23.

The members of the expedition had a terrible experience while crossing the Verkhoyansk mountains. The cold was intense, 63 degrees below zero being registered. All the travelers were frostbitten.

Otherwise they were well and in good spirits and were leaving the same day for Sredne Kolyansk a town of East Siberia, 900 miles farther on, which the party hoped to reach about the middle of March. Then it was their intention to push on 1500 miles to East Cape, on Behring strait. Probably the next news of the expedition will be its arrival in the United States via Behring strait.

DeWindt mentions a report that Baron Toll's expeditionary ship Zaria was stranded on Siberian islands, with only seven tons of coal on board.

Advices from St. Petersburg December 19, 1901, said that Baron Toll, who is the leader of an important expedition to explore New Siberia, telegraphing from Yakutsk, announced that his winter quarters had been established on the Nerpenkaye coast in the neighborhood of the Lena Delta, and that an observatory station had been opened at Kotelnik at Kotelnik (Kotelnik) island. The Toll expedition intended to circumnavigate the Siberian islands.

For Breach of Promise.

Canton, O., April 23.—Katie Evans has sued George W. Hay for $2,500 for alleged breach of promise. She avers in her petition that she was his exclusive company and sweetheart for thirteen years; that he promised to marry her, but failed to keep his word, and that her peace of mind has been damaged.

THE COUNCIL UNDERSTANDS ITS BUSINESS.

There is no necessity for the American-Tribune to be so badly frightened and panicky over the policy of the City Council on the water works question. If that paper had not pursued the course it did previous to the late election in its reckless statements and exaggerated misrepresentation of the Council it would stand in better light today before the community than it does. The fact of the matter is, that the people of the city had immensely more confidence in the Council than they had in the A-T, and that accounts for the overwhelming majority in favor of the water works proposition. As for the Council's action Monday night constituting the water works committee, there was nothing new or surprising about it. The Council simply proposes to proceed exactly in accordance with the original intention. At no time did the Council intend or expect to issue the bonds earlier than two years from this time, or earlier than necessary to complete a new plant by the time the present contract with the water company expires. The passage of the supplementary ordinance limiting the bond issue to two years hence, was wholly unnecessary, for there never was any intention of issuing them before it was necessary to do so. And as to the American-Tribune's statements about "borrowing money in anticipation of the issue of the bonds" and that work may "commence at once on the plant," they are as absurd and untruthful as the statements and arguments generally made by that paper before election.

But the Council fully understands its duties and responsibilities. It knows that there is much preliminary work to be done in the matter of building a new water works plant, and it proposes to proceed with this necessary preliminary work from time to time as good business foresight requires.

PHILIPPINE CRUELITIES.

The Senate committee investigating cruelties and torture in the Philippines, applied to prisoners by order of American officers, has taken up the concentration cruelty, to drive the people from their homes to the woods or the towns and concentrate them. "Whom did the army borrow that from?" inquired Senator Culberson. "I saw it in Cuba," answered the witness, "under the authority of General Weyler." So here we have the evidence that the methods in the Philippines were borrowed from Weyler, whose cruelties had much to do with the intervention of the United States in Cuba to vindicate civilization and Christianity. Put a mark there. As to the "water cure," the witness had never seen anyone die under its infliction, but had seen men made unconscious and heard of deaths under the torture. A leading paper remarks:

"The spectacle of Uncle Sam, clad in his stars and stripes, administering the 'water cure' to a little brown man would not look well alongside the figure of Nathan Hale, plumed and proud and erect, regretting that he had but one life to give for his country. He screamed terribly and his eyes were bloodshot," said Edward Davis of the Twenty-sixth volunteers, confirming the testimony of Sergeant Riley concerning the same event."

The victim was president or mayor of the town, fifty years old, who had refused to give information equivalent to a betrayal of his country. The torturers had learned this art from their Macabebe scouts, and they had become apt pupils in this school of barbarism. A scathing comment was made upon such performances by Senator Turner of Washington, in a debate last week. He said that if "that great man, Abraham Lincoln," could come back to earth, he would not recognize the party which had honored him—"a party," he added, "which has so little regard for liberty and the sacred principles upon which our free institutions are founded that, at this moment, it is endeavoring to drown in a sea of human blood the aspirations of a friendly and an allied people for liberty and independence."

ONE OF ROOSEVELT'S OBJECTIONS TO MILES.

A Washington correspondent who is supposed to be friendly to the administration quotes President Roosevelt as saying that the great objection to General Miles was that he "has acted with Democratic senators, members of the Philippine committee, in trying to discredit the army."

The words quoted are those of the correspondent, who says further that the President asked whether "that sort of thing was to be tolerated." If the President said that he insulted the Democratic members of the committee and calumniated General Miles.

The Democratic members of the committee are seeking to get at the truth about certain things, not to discredit the army. All that General Miles has done in this connection has been to call attention to a report of one of the administration's own officials in the Philippines—a report which the administration suppressed, and which it has thought it worth while to investigate only since Miles has brought it to light. The General's offense consists in bringing out official documents which the Democrats may be able to use to the disadvantage of the administration. For that he is to be decapitated.

The appointment by President Roosevelt of "Headman" Clarkson, a late Iowa politician, to the important office of surveyor of the port of New York, has aroused intense opposition among the civil service reformers, for Clarkson stands for opposition to the reform. He assailed Roosevelt when the latter was at the head of the civil service commission, and the latter in return denounced Clarkson in a public speech at St. Louis as the representative of the spoils idea in politics. Now he appoints this same Clarkson to important office. He has shifted from Iowa to New York, but cuts no figure in the politics or business of that city. He is a spoils waif that the President is caring for.

A Republican paper feels much aggrieved that the officers of the law in Kentucky are still bent on arresting those who had part in the conspiracy of murder and assassination in Kentucky, whereby Governor Goebel was made way with. It is almost jocular over further arrests. The conspiracy for murder was a secret one, in which numbers participated, and the participants were all Republicans of more or less consequence in their party. In American history there is no record of a more treacherous and diabolical crime. It was on a par with the murders of Garfield and McKinley, save that there was no political motive back of them. Goebel was assassinated because of his politics, and the assassins who plotted in secret and openly committed the foul deed were Republican politicians. If they did not and do not merit punishment, neither did Guitau nor Czolgosz.

Soil For Rubarb.

Rubarb needs a deep and very fertile soil, and it is useless to expect to grow it in a thin, dry soil unless under irrigation; not that it needs wet ground by any means, but a soil retentive of moisture and rather inclined to clay, though good rubarb can be grown in quite a sandy soil if it be well manured. No amount of fertilizer will take the place of stable manure with this plant. The organic matter in the manure, making the soil more retentive of moisture, makes it indispensable when large and succulent stalks are desired.

Dry Application of Poisons.

If small garden patches are dusted with poison from cans or with hand bellows for the destruction of insects, it is advisable always to dilute the poison with ten parts of flour or powdered lime, and for application to vegetables which will ultimately be used for food one ounce of the poison should be mixed with six pounds of flour or ten of lime and dusted merely enough to show evenly over the surface. An insecticide should not be applied to lettuce or other vegetables the free leafage of which is eaten.

IDOL OF INDIAN PRINCE.

Edna May Adored by Rajah Kumar and Loaded With Gifts.

Edna May, the fascinating New York actress, who is still appearing in "Kitty Grey" at the Apollo theater in London, lately made a great conquest, that of Rajah Kumar, the son and heir of the maharajah of Kuch Behar, one of the wealthiest of the Indian princes and a well known figure in London society.

Kumar has become absolutely Edna's shadow, says the New York World. He is to be seen about with her everywhere—shopping in the west end, motoring in the park, luncheon and dining at various restaurants, while every evening he sits admiring her from the stalls. He has loaded Edna with splendid presents. The other night she made a decided sensation at the Savoy hotel by appearing in a very smart frock blazing with all the Kuch Behar crown jewels, valued at nearly $2,000,000, which were presented to her by the rajah. This came to the ears of the maharajah, who forthwith visited Edna and demanded that she restore the gems, which, besides being of immense value, are crown property, and it is not in the power of any one, not excepting himself, to give them away.

Kuch Behar is a native state of Bengal, India, a trifle larger than Rhode Island, very fertile and, like most Indian states, very rich. It has a population of about 600,000 persons. The maharajah, or sovereign, is entitled to a salute of thirteen guns—not so many as some of the other native rulers, but enough to show that he is a potentate of dignity and power.

The Work of "Bustling Americans."

Mr. Pierpont Morgan is still in front of the stage. What he cannot buy in the world is not apparently worth buying. But a tribute must be paid to the magnificent talent with which the Morgan syndicate and other American combinations and moneyed persons succeed in impressing themselves upon the world's attention, says the London Outlook. If they accomplish even one-quarter of the projects with which they are connected by rumor and announcement, the world will shortly be so Americanized that nothing will remain but to adopt the stars and stripes as the common flag for the great powers. One thing the bustling Americans certainly are effecting—they are stirring up many dormant energies and ambitions in Europe and provoking a spirit of competition and emulation which cannot fail to be beneficial, and to no country more than to Britain.

RELEASED.

Some years ago, while on my return from a trip into Virginia I fell in with a young fellow who was on his way to the Rocky mountains. He showed me a photograph of a beautiful girl of whom he seemed exceedingly proud and told me she was his sweetheart, to whom he was engaged and whom he expected to marry as soon as he could become established in the practice of the law.

Suddenly and without any warning the engine left the rails, and the long train of coaches followed. There was no embankment, only a flat piece of country, and so it was not so disastrous as it otherwise would have been. I was so bruised and stunned that I scarcely realized what had occurred. It was after 9 o'clock in the evening, and I had scarcely more than extracted myself from the car, which was literally torn to pieces, when the wreck caught on fire. Most of the passengers, however, had been rescued, but a few of them were still in the wreck, and so we started in at once to assist the trainmen in doing what we could. I lost sight of my companion as soon as the car went over, but after I got out of the car I wondered where he was.

Just then the flames shot into the air, and we heard a shriek. Rushing to the other side of the car, I beheld my young friend underneath a heavy beam—in fact, the lower half of his body was under the debris of the wreck—and he was jammed in so tight that we could not possibly release him without more assistance. We had nothing to work with, only one ax having been taken out of the cars, and that was broken and of little use. The flames had already reached his feet, and his cries for help were heartrending. I can assure you, there was absolutely nothing we could do to help him—not a thing in which we could get any water, and if there had been there was not a drop nearer than a mile, for the creek at that point was at least that far away. I pulled at the debris until I burned my left hand so severely that I have used it but very little since, and, as you see, it is badly scarred.

We worked trying to save him until the fire drove us back. His appeals were something terrible to hear, and he begged us again and again to shoot him. This, of course, no one would do, although it would have been the thing to put him out of his misery.

But just then help came to him. From the side of the track in the darkness, for it was an inky night, appeared a slender figure in white. It came up without a sound. I stood where I could see her very plainly, for the figure was that of a young woman. Her face was ashen, her features perfect, and I recognized at once in her features the photograph my young friend had shown me on the train. She glided up to where the victim lay. We heard the sharp report of a pistol, and the apparition vanished instantly. I just had time to see the poor fellow before the flames closed over him, and there was a bullet hole in his forehead. He was dead. The flames rushed over him, and I turned away.

The next day from out the ruins we took his remains. The skull was badly charred, but in it was a hole like that made by a ball, and inside of the remains of the skull was a small piece of molten lead. I went to the telegraph office, only a few miles down the track, and telegraphed to the girl, whose name and address he had fortunately given me. An answer came from the girl's father stating that steps would at once be taken for the proper care of the remains, and that they would be taken back to the Old Dominion.

From there I went home. Only a short while after that I was compelled to make another trip to Virginia. While in the state I chanced to pass through the town where the prospective father-in-law of the young man resided, and so I took the liberty of calling at his home, knowing that they would no doubt like to hear about the accident in which the young man met so unluckily an end.

The old gentleman was at home and very glad to see me. I told him all the circumstances of the strange event that had taken place. When I was through, he went into another room and brought out a small pistol and said he had no doubt that was the weapon that put Harry, as he called him, out of misery. He said that the night before the accident occurred his daughter, the lady to whom my young acquaintance was engaged, was taken suddenly ill and died before morning. On the table in her room was this small, ivory handled pistol, which he found and presented to her before he left. It was loaded.

The morning after the accident one cartridge was found to have been exploded, and no one could possibly account for the curious happening, as the pistol had not been touched by any one after the young lady's death. I had the little lump of lead which I found in the unfortunate young man's skull, and we weighed it and also one of the pistol balls, and after careful examination they were found to be of exactly the same caliber. I am firmly of the belief that the spirit of that young woman came that dark and awful night to the relief of her intended husband.

Diamond Back Terrapin.

The genuine diamond back terrapin is found only on the shores of Chesapeake bay, and they are not plentiful. To catch a diamond back hunters search the marshes, armed with only a stick about the size of a rained and having a steel point. They watch for depressions in the shallow water of the marsh and then begin to prod. The steel strikes the back of the terrapin, and it is an easy matter to dig through a foot of soft mud to its resting place. The catch of two seven inch terrapin is a lucky week's hunt.

RELEASED.
Some years ago, while on my return from a trip into Virginia I fell in with a young fellow who was on his way to the Rocky mountains. He showed me a photograph of a beautiful girl of whom he seemed exceedingly proud and told me she was his sweetheart, to whom he was engaged and whom he expected to marry as soon as he could become established in the practice of the law.

Suddenly and without any warning the engine left the rails, and the long train of coaches followed. There was no embankment, only a flat piece of country, and so it was not so disastrous as it otherwise would have been. I was so bruised and stunned that I scarcely realized what had occurred. It was after 9 o'clock in the evening, and I had scarcely more than extracted myself from the car, which was literally torn to pieces, when the wreck caught on fire. Most of the passengers, however, had been rescued, but a few of them were still in the wreck, and so we started in at once to assist the trainmen in doing what we could. I lost sight of my companion as soon as the car went over, but after I got out of the car I wondered where he was.

Just then the flames shot into the air, and we heard a shriek. Rushing to the other side of the car, I beheld my young friend underneath a heavy beam—in fact, the lower half of his body was under the debris of the wreck—and he was jammed in so tight that we could not possibly release him without more assistance. Batteries: Leever and Zimmer, Stimmel and Bergen. Attendance 15,000.

Chicago, April 22.—Rain stopped the St. Louis-Chicago game in the last half of the third with the score 1 to 0 in favor of Chicago. Catcher Zalusky was today released to the Minneapolis club.
The opening of the National League season at Pittsburgh Tuesday, was very auspicious, and Fred Clarke's men threw off the Cincinnati "hoodoo" that has hung over the Pirates for years, and took the game from McPhee's Red Legs 4 to 3. Cincinnati's elongated twirler, Archie Stimmel, was battered freely, 13 hits being made off his delivery, while Leever for Pittsburgh kept the 8 hits made off him well scattered. Preceding the game the usual opening parade was made through the downtown sections. At the park both teams headed by a brass band lined up at the home plate and marched to deep center field, where the steel flag pole had been erected. Here the champions hauled up the pennant, the band played the "Star Spangled Banner," and the large crowd broke forth in cheers.

President Ben Johnson of the American League, arrived in Philadelphia Tuesday night, where he is in conference with the owners of the "Athletic" franchise of that city, as a result of the far reaching decision in the La Jole case by the Pennsylvania Supreme court. The American League's attorneys were in consultation all day Tuesday over long distance telephones.
That luck is an important factor in the results of base ball games, was evidenced by the game at Philadelphia Tuesday. The home team made only three hits and four errors, to nine hits and only two errors for Brooklyn, and yet won the game 4 to 1.

The ministers of Cleveland expect to appeal to Governor Nash to stop Sunday ball playing, outside the city limits. The Governor will have another chance to call out the militia, as he did to stop the Jeffries-Ruhlin contest at Cincinnati.

The management of the Philadelphia American League team have decided to fight the La Jole decision, as their lawyers tell them that the decision applies to that player only and cannot affect other players who jumped the Philadelphia National. It is understood that La Jole will be sent out of the state of Pennsylvania before the injunction can be served on him, and the famous player will probably be found covering second base for the Athletics at the opening game at Baltimore.

President Robinson of the St. Louis club of the National League, has decided to seek injunctions against the players who left his team for the St. Louis American team, to prevent them from playing. Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox, says he will keep McFarland, the Philadelphia catcher hidden, while playing in Pennsylvania, rather than have him go back to the Quakers. McFarland has received notice to report for duty at Philadelphia, following the La Jole decision.

The American Association and American League seasons opened today.
The Enquirer and some other papers which have been true to the fortunes of the almost disrupted National League, are now indulging in the "I told you so," sort of paragraphs, anent the National league opening, and the attendance figures in the various cities on that day and since, claiming that this shows that the National is still the "fans" first and only love. Such a deduction is abortive. It proves nothing of the kind. It does prove that base ball is still the greatest of out-door sports, and people will go to see the game. That is all. If these writers will wait until the American opens in cities where they compete with the National, they may attain their joyous paragraphs to a minor key.

Bob Fitzsimmons and Jim Corbett had on the gloves for a friendly bout in New York, Monday and the spectators saw some great work. Corbett was slabby and after the second round was blowing like a porpoise. Fitz was not in the least distressed.

Heller's Testimony.
Albert Heller, living at 1114 Farnham street, Omaha, says: "I have tried most everything that is used as a preventive or cure for headache, but nothing did me so much good as Krause's Headache Capsules. Others who have used them say the same thing." Price 25c. Sold by all druggists.

Lumber Goes Up in Smoke.

The SPORTING WORLD

Princeton's Able Twirler.
W. H. Underhill, the leading pitcher at Princeton this year, should lead the intercollegiate twirling list at the close of the season. He wound up last year's playing in sensational style, winning

W. H. ("BUTSY") UNDERHILL OF PRINCETON, the two championship games against Yale, and he appears to be rounding into the best form of his career.
Underhill hails from East Orange, N. J., where he won fame in various branches of amateur sport. He has played on the Princeton varsity football team for two years and is no unimportant figure in track athletics.
Underhill's pitching is the Tigers' chief dependence this season, and, although an unfortunate accident on the team's southern tour had him out of the game temporarily, "Butsy," as he is best known, is now in his old time condition.

Harvard is on the Princeton baseball schedule this year, and, together with Yale, will endeavor to defeat the Tigers in their own den during commencement week. Underhill is certain to pitch in both games, and Princeton money galore will be on hand to back the chances of the orange and black.

Strength of Rival Leagues.
The relative playing strength of the National and American leagues was a question of warm conjecture last season, and now that half a dozen prominent National players have deserted to Ban Johnson's club the discussion is sure to be renewed. It is probable that a post series of games between the winning teams of the two leagues will be played at the close of the coming season. Comiskey of Chicago is a warm advocate of the plan, and he endeavored to match his champion White Sox against Barney Dreyfuss' Pirates last year, but nothing came of it. The scheme is feasible, would be profitable and would definitely settle the opposing claims.

There is one blot on the shield of the American league, and that is its brazen countenancing of contract jumping. The American now has on its rolls the largest number of contract breakers ever known. "Breakers ahead!" will be the cry if this dishonorable support of lax business methods continues, and the American league will be entirely to blame. But "anything to beat the National" seems to be the battle shout, and it is not likely that the throwing out of bait to weak-minded but strong playing ball tossers will soon cease. Early last year Ban Johnson took a firm personal stand against contract jumpers, but he has been sidetracked, and the will of the individual managers holds good.

Wonderful Jake Beckley.
Perhaps one of the most remarkable baseball players of later days is Jake Beckley, who played his fourteenth season last year with the Cincinnati Reds. In spite of his age, Jake is yet a fast player. He has been one of the first twenty-five batters in the National league for ten years. He has never hit under 250 and has met the ball for an average as high as 344. He has figured in 1,732 professional games, has been to bat 6,985 times, and if all the pitchers he has faced were marshaled together they would form a regiment. He has made 2,173 hits and scored 1,294 runs. His batting average for the fourteen years is .311.

Get of St. Simon.
Lady Reel, dam of the famous sixty thousand dollar Hamburg and the ten thousand dollar Frankfurt, has foaled a black filly by St. Simon at James R. Keene's Castleton (Ky.) stud. Keene paid $11,000 for the mare. The filly is the first get of St. Simon to be foaled in the United States and is a sister to August Belmont's twenty thousand dollar yearling.

The Deleahanty Family.
Five of the famous Deleahanty family are playing ball this season. Ed is with Washington in the American league, Jim with New York, Joe with Worcester. Tom with Denver, while Frank, the youngest of those in the business, is with the Warren (O.) semiprofessional nine.

All Humors

Are impure matters which the skin, liver, kidneys and other organs can not take care of without help, there is such an accumulation of them.
They litter the whole system.
Pimples, boils, eczema and other eruptions, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, bilious turns, fits of indigestion, dull headaches and many other troubles are due to them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove all humors, overcome all their effects, strengthen, tone and invigorate the whole system.
"I had salt rheum on my hands so that I could not work. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it drove out the humor. I continued its use till the sores disappeared." Mrs. I. A. Brown, Rumford Falls, Me.
Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

FUNERAL

Of Mrs. Ellen A. Williams Has Been Arranged for Ten O'Clock on Thursday Morning.

As briefly announced in Tuesday's Advocate Mrs. Ellen A. Williams, who for several weeks past has been seriously ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Parsons, of 266 East Main street, this city, passed quietly away at 10:03 Monday night. Mrs. Williams was born February 11, 1835, in Guernsey county, Ohio. She was the daughter of Sewell S. and Mary Emerson, and the greater part of her life was spent in Guernsey county. Fifteen years ago, together with other members of her family she removed to Newark which has since been her home. Her kind and genial disposition made for her a host of friends who will sincerely miss her and mourn her loss. Funeral services, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Bovey will be held at the residence, 266 East Main street at 10 a. m. Thursday, April 24.

She leaves seven children, Mrs. Catlett, Mrs. Ebbett and Mrs. Long, of Cambridge; Mrs. Parsons and Geo. W. Williams of Newark, Mrs. Kehoe of Vicksburg, Miss, and Mrs. Ward of near Kennonsburg, Ohio. The brothers and sisters of the deceased are: Albert G. Emerson of Peoria, Ill.; Mrs. V. C. Emerson of near Salisbury, O.; S. S. Emerson of Zanesville; and Geo B Emerson of New York City.

Furious Racing Promised.

Racing at a meeting sometimes has objectionable features, but not so with the racing to be seen on the hippodrome track of the Great Wallace Show, which will exhibit in Newark on Saturday, May 3.

With the evil influences of a professional race course eliminated, and the best attention given to every detail, the hippodrome racing of the Wallace Circus is real; it is fast and in earnest. The variety of the races, together with the required skill for turning at the short ends of the track at full speed, gives to every spectator a thrill of genuine sensation. There are twelve different styles of races. Mr. Wallace pays a premium to the lady and gentleman every week winning the greatest number of races during the week. There is no question but that the races of the Wallace Show are on the square. Even those people who are not fond of racing generally admit that the genuine, exciting races of the Wallace Show are an exhilarating climax to its excellent circus performances.

An Iowa paper said that, "even the tigers in the Wallace cages are larger and finer than his tigers on the billboards." That was an original way the Hawkeye editor had of expressing the general verdict of the public, that the Great Wallace Show is larger and better than it claims to be.

STATE A BATTLEFIELD

Peaceful Revolution Has Been Started in Connecticut.

LABOR WINNING OVER CAPITAL

Workingmen Carried Three Municipal Elections—Hartford's Mayor Sees in Result New Order of Things Which May Spread All Over the United States in Near Future.

Staid old Connecticut has become the new battleground of labor and capital. A coal shoveler, a mechanic and a dry goods clerk have within a few weeks been made mayors of three of its most important cities.

Danbury is next to vote for a latter for mayor and Meriden for a mayor laborer. The whole state is stirring with the peaceful revolution which threatens to deliver the machinery of government of all the cities of the state into the hands of workingmen. They are confident of electing the governor this fall. It is a clear cut fight all over the state between the corporations and the forces of labor.

The deep moving current of rebellion was seemingly without concert. It all came from a common cause. It set to working, with results unequalled in any attempt of workingmen to control municipal politics before. This is the score up to date:

Bridgeport—Mayor, Dennis Mulvihill, stoker.
Ansonia—Mayor, Stephen Charters, mechanic.
Hartford—Mayor, Ignatius A. Sullivan, dry goods clerk.

Not a defeat has been chalked up. The leaders declare they have found the secret of success for workingmen in politics. The eyes of the workingmen of the nation are on the experiment. Many believe that the movement in Connecticut is destined to be historic and marks the beginning of a complete revolution in the relations of the workman toward public affairs.

Mayor Sullivan, the new mayor of Hartford, is not a dreamer, but he declares Connecticut has found the secret of success in politics for the workman. He says that the American workingmen have only to take lessons from Connecticut to dominate the municipal politics of the country. He is confident that the workingmen will elect the governor of the state this fall.

A New York World correspondent spent three hours with this interesting man the other day, and in the course of their conversation Mayor Sullivan said:

"I have only this fixed determination in mind, to give the city an honest, impartial administration, guided by good common sense. Common sense is hard to beat. The league has a platform, which will be followed. It mentions a few specific matters, but it may be summed up in the pledge to give the city an honest and economical administration."

"I want to bring labor and capital nearer together. That shall be the aim of my administration. A better understanding is all that is needed. Half the problem would be solved if we could only bring them to understand each other. Then would come sympathy. 'Abraham Lincoln is my model and ideal,' said the mayor. 'Right here in Hartford in a speech he made during the great shoe strike at Lynn in 1861 he said: 'I thank God for labor unions. I thank God that there are men who know when to stop.' I wonder why they have left that out of Lincoln's speeches."

"Workingmen have been impotent in politics heretofore. On election day I have seen workingmen hard at work at the polls. Working for what? Working for the ticket that somebody else put out. It occurred to me that if workingmen could do such effective work for others they could do it for themselves. They have the power. The problem is to discover how it may be used. The intelligent workingmen of Connecticut have found the way."

"The only real clear cut victory on the straight issues was here. At Bridgeport the issue was a corrupt administration. At Ansonia the injunction issue decided the election. One corporation owned the town and ruled by court injunctions. Here it was a straight out issue of securing the recognition due to the workingmen and long denied."

"We thought the city administration here was bad. Not only were workingmen unable to get out of it what they thought right, but it was believed that money had passed hands among city officials. These things finally led the workingmen to assert themselves."

Two Beautiful New Flowers.
Among the new flowers of merit are the Comet and branching asters, says the May Ladies' Home Journal. The first named has much less formality of petal and general arrangement than the better known sorts like the rose and peony flowered class. These as well as the branching asters bear so close a resemblance to some of the popular chrysanthemums in form and color that they are often used in their stead for decorative purposes in the fall, and few persons detect the substitution. They last for two weeks after cutting if the water in which they are placed is renewed daily.

Hartford's Good Fruit Crop Predicted.
The Georgia Fruit Growers' association assembled recently at Macon, Ga. The opinion is that the fruit has suffered but little damage from the cold, and the outlook is favorable for a good crop, says the Atlanta Constitution. The growers seem well satisfied with the present condition of fruit.

CHANGES IN FASHION.

Revival of Old Styles in Modified Form.

So far the predicted revival of panthers has not come to pass, but very small eloped basques appear on the new model bodices and blouses. They are cut to shape in semicircular fashion and resemble the narrow gilet frills. Embroideries of silk, chenille and tinsel are quite le d'genre cri, and some are really works of art.
Printed satin, muslin and lace are used for evening toilets, but exquisite vests are prepared for wearing with taffeta day gowns. The Richelieu collars are very fashionable, and these deep collars covering the shoulders will be worn in silk incrustated with lace, in silk muslin applique at the edge, and in all lace of the heavy point type.

Nearly every hat one sees at a smart function displays a more or less complete drapery of lace. Some of the newer models are so flat that one needs must put the coil of hair quite at the back or low on the neck, as to wear it on the head or poised high at the back is absolutely impossible.

There is another attempt to revive the accordion plaited skirt, but it is not likely to be a success, as the outline of the hips is so increased and destroyed that, while tight skirts prevail, it is not in accord with the present outline. Flounces and narrow frills plaited in this style are charming on plain skirts, and the modern evening wrap demands many plisse frills of lace, chiffon or soft texture. JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY ACCESSORIES.

Parasols, Shoes and Hosiery for the Summer Girl.

The new parasols are much trimmed with lace, and those of white glaze or satin are almost covered with lines of black lace. The vandkyed and scalloped laces, also those in waved and scroll designs, are much used on parasols, the ecru and cream lace on black.

WHITE CREPE DE CHINE.

the black chantilly and blond laces on white and pale colors. Even en-tout-as have borders woven or printed on the silk, and very elaborate parasols have coverings of lace and frills of chiffon. Dresden handles are lovely, and the sticks are invariably enameled to match the sunshade.

Smart footwear will have moderate heels and pointed toes in which the point is graduated off by slow degrees. A very chic shoe shown in glass, patent and tan leather has three small straps to button over the instep and a simple jet buckle or stud on the toe. Gloves in white, lavender, primrose, cane and black tint will be fashionably worn, and plain backs will be preferred to those with stitichings.

Flowers will be much worn during the summer season, and even the toques prepared for quite early spring are bright in color and much trimmed with foliage or blossom. The wreath of roses appears in the tiny Banksia variety and also in quite full sized crushed roses, without foliage. These latter in a bluish rose tint are charming when partially draped with black. Pallebearers' Coach.

The handsome new pallebearers coach that Bowers & Bradley have just added to their already up-to-date equipment is attracting much attention and favorable comment from everybody. The vehicle which is a beauty has three seats, finely upholstered in leather, rubber tires, plate glass windows, electric signal buttons, and a general finish and style that is very attractive. The new coach which will do away with the necessity of crowding a half dozen pallebearers into two seats of an ordinary cab, was made by the Riddle Coach and Hearse company, of Ravenna, O. It is just as comfortable as it is handsome.

U. S. Telephone Lines.

Information comes from Cleveland that the bankers' committee of the Everett-Moore syndicate has received a very liberal offer for the United States Telephone company (long distance) with the result that the property will, in all probability, soon pass into the hands of strong eastern capitalists, who are already largely interested in independent telephone properties. The United States Telephone company owns all the toll lines that connect 300 different exchanges in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Indiana. It is said to be the biggest earning property of any of the syndicate telephone companies, and is making very large gains. The long distance connections of the independent company of this city are a part of the United States system.

BUILDING—The large frame house on Church street that has been occupied by J. F. The adjoining building across the alley will also be raised another story. The work is being done by J. C. Linn, the contractor.

They Never Depress.

You will never have that depressed or stupid feeling after taking Clinic Headache Wafers for the cure of your headache. They work directly on the nerves, act as a tonic to the heart and leave you bright and ready for work. A child or the weakest invalid can take them with perfect safety. 10 cents at Hall's drug store.

How They Voted.

The voting for President of the Board of Education at its organization on Monday evening, was as follows: On the first three ballots three of the Republican members voted for Mr. Christian, and Mr. Haight, Democrat, also voted for Mr. Christian. On the same ballots three Democrats and Mr. Christian voted for Mr. Haight. Thereafter until the sixth ballot the Republican members of the board voted for Mr. Christian and the Democrats voted for Mr. Haight. On the sixth ballot all the Republican members and Mr. Haight voted for Mr. Christian, which elected him. Mr. Keller, on the same ballot also voted for Mr. Christian, as a compliment, he already having enough votes to elect him. Mr. Henderson and Mr. Keckley voted for Mr. Haight. This is given because of errors in the ballots announced in another paper last night.

What Causes Headache.

Exhausted and irritable conditions of the Nervous System produce Headaches. The cure is to restore the action of the nerves to their normal condition and give the heart a tonic. Clinic Headache Wafers are just this cure; they act on the Nerves and are a tonic to the heart. Absolutely harmless. 10 cents at Hall's drug store.

SENATOR MORGAN OF ALABAMA

REPLIES TO A LETTER FROM DR.
C. P. KING.

The Distinguished Southern Statesman Pens a Courteous and Appropriate Answer

The following correspondence has just taken place between Dr. C. P. King of this city and United States Senator John T. Morgan of Alabama:

Newark, O., April 13, 1901.

Hon. John T. Morgan, U. S. Senator, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Senator:—You will, I hope, pardon me for thus addressing you,

as I have not the honor of a personal acquaintance with you. I feel, however that I know you, for I have watched your manly career ever since you were elected United States Senator from Alabama. The patriotic and manly stand you have always taken upon all the great questions of national interest have commanded my highest esteem. To you, more than to any living man, we owe the success which will result eventually in the building of the great Nicaragua or

Panama Canal. Without your masterly statesmanship, I am satisfied this grand scheme would never have been accomplished. I have just read an exceedingly able article from your pen in "Collier's Illustrated Weekly," entitled "The Hymn of the Great Republic."

The whole article from beginning to end, was so replete with grand thoughts and noble sentiments, that it touched me deeply—coming as it does from a Southern man. I am proud to know that we have one country—

no North, no South, no East, no

West; all Americans, one flag, one country, one destiny.

Such articles as yours are the ones

most needed at this time, to heal forever the breaches which were caused by our last great but melancholy civil war. May God grant that the animosities of the past may be forever obliterated between the two sections of our great republic.

Pardon me for what may seem presumption on the part of a stranger in thus addressing you. I am proud to belong to a republic which can boast of men of your heroic mould, and it is my earnest prayer that a kind

Providence may spare your life for many years to come, to uphold the honor and dignity of our common country.

I would be pleased to receive your autograph, as I look upon you as one of the great men in our Nation today. With kind regards to yourself and family, I subscribe myself with most distinguished consideration.

Yours truly,

CHAS. P. KING.

To Hon. John T. Morgan, U. S. Senator,

Washington, D. C.

P. S. I take the liberty of sending to you a copy of my brochure on

"Cremation," a subject which I think of National interest. C. P. K.

In answer to the foregoing Dr. King has received the following from Senator

Morgan:

United States Senate

Washington, D. C., April 20, 1902

Dear Doctor King:—If the greed for gold that tempted Queen Elizabeth and our ancestry to bring to this lovely land a barbarous and slavish race, to become members of our households, had not been so inhumanly intense and covetous, you and I would not have felt that there was anything that could estrange us. If that was a sin, it was not our sin, and, as it has been expiated in blood, it is more than pardoned. It is expurgated

it would be very unworthy of us

if we let the shadow of it linger to cloud the fair days of our lives, when the substance has vanished. So I welcome your good words and good opinions, as if they came from a brother, who is proud of my kinship, rather than from a reconciled enemy, to render me tardy justice. Evidently, you are my warm friend, and I reciprocate the feeling.

It is deeply gratifying to me that the point on which we have happened to meet is the common love of our country, and its splendid institutions. I have, however, a task that is very heavy, to endeavor to secure its blessings, in their fullness, to the people and states where the sacrificial altars were burning like furnaces of wrath, and where the ashes yet remain to be removed. It is to this duty that my life is consecrated, and, to perform it,

I look to and hope for the aid of the people of the United States at large. If I had only them to serve my task would be comparatively a light one; but I must work to clear off the debris of ruined estates, while I try to lead a helping hand to increase the prosperity of the whole country.

I feel that I have your sympathy in this work, which has been a heavy task on my advanced years, and I am grateful to you. If the canal is built the deliverance of the South will be assured. If it is not, the same evil spirit that loaded the South with slavery—callousness—will destroy it a second time.

I will send you some remarks I have made in the Senate on this subject, recently. If it has not been done, I am so busy that I am apt to forget details.

Your brochure on cremation is good, wise and necessary to proper hygiene but it cuts down a sentiment that is all pervading. I believe in cremation for everybody but myself and my loved ones. And this is almost the universal feeling. In legislation, we are in constant warfare with sentiment, as the Doctors are, in physic; and I conclude that the sentiments of the people are an essential feature of good laws.

In the final relegation of "ashes to ashes," you may find a higher law that will help out the argument. Is it not a command that says, "Ashes to ashes?"

With earnest hope that you may long escape this concluding sentence I am your sincere stranger friend,

JOHN T. MORGAN.

PELLETS OF SNOW.

How They Fling and Drift in the Adirondack Region.

On a good drifting day in the Adirondacks the snow comes not in the star shaped flakes that look so pretty when portrayed on a page of the dictionary, but in small pellets. These pellets are in shape like tiny white footballs usually, and they come rolling and tumbling down wind as if they had been "kicked for fair" by the halfback gods of the gale. And yet while they roll and tumble and bound they and lodging places, and as the idler gazes he sees them pile up in a wall on the crest of the road cut. Higher and higher grows the pile, forming at first a vertical wall, but before this has risen three inches it is seen to overhang the gully.

Though round and easily rolled, these pellets in some way fit to each other as bricks would, until the overhang is perhaps a fifth as great as the elevation of the wall, and then, marvelous and impossible as it would seem to the unaccustomed observer, a lip forms on the crest of the wall, and soon it begins to droop and hang down. Wider and longer it grows, farther and farther it drags, until its shape is precisely like the lip formed on a huge wave when it breaks on a shoal water beach. Lips that are ten feet wide and hang down three feet clear of all, though but six or eight inches thick where they join the chin of the wall, are not uncommon. By what magic is it that these frozen, oblong pellets that go bounding along as merrily as footballs form into such a shape as that? Of course if the storm continues a time usually comes when the lips break off because of their great weight. And then no new lip forms to replace the lost one. The snow merely drops over into the lee of the wall and gradually fills the cutting.—

CHAMP CLARK STORIES

Amusing Speeches In Congressional Debates.

How Congressman Grosvenor Was Bearded by James Hamilton Lewis.
Signal Triumph of a Young Statesman—Wit of the Representatives
From the State of Washington—A Strong Argument For Pork—Sentence From the Bible Made Clear.

(Copyright, 1902, by Champ Clark.)

One of two things is true about the new state of Washington—either she possesses an unusually able set of men or it is exceedingly lucky in selecting her representatives and senators in congress. In the Fifty-fifth congress no two new members attracted more attention than her representatives, Colonel James Hamilton Lewis and Hon. W. C. Jones of Spokane. A man of shrewd talents than Lewis has not appeared in Washington in a generation. He is eccentric, fantastic, brilliant, bizarre, unique, but withal a man of great ability and vast information. His vocabulary is amazing, ranging from the most ancient classic to the latest slang.

Roasting a Veteran.

His artistic flaying of General Charles Henry Grosvenor has become historic. It was a masterpiece of wit, humor, sarcasm, ridicule and irony. If the spirits of the mighty dead take any interest in mundane affairs, Voltaire must have had an hour of intense enjoyment while Lewis was dressing down "the grin old lion of Athens."

The sparkling Washingtonian roared to a beautiful and lovely brown the "great prophet of the Hoeking valley," a feat hazardous in design and difficult of accomplishment, essayed by many adventurous statesmen and performed by none prior to Lewis' audacious achievement. It was a great day for Lewis and for all who heard him, always excepting his illustrious victim.

In the art of politeness—in bowing, scraping and genuflections—Lewis could give cards and spades to Lord Chesterfield and beat him at his own game could he return to earth. His very politeness greatly heightened the effect of his castigation. When he finished, General Grosvenor was badly in need of an artist skilled in the skin grafting trade.

Mr. W. C. Jones is a man of large capacity and solid attainments, who was a most useful and influential legislator, enjoying thoroughly the respect and confidence of all who knew him. He did not figure in the public prints as much as Lewis, but did his full quantum of hard work.

Enter Cushman and "Yakima" Jones.

When the political wheel revolved in 1898, Colonel Lewis and Mr. W. C. Jones were submerged beneath the black waters of defeat, and Francis W. Cushman and Wesley L. Jones, nicknamed "Yakima" Jones from his place of residence, impinged upon the public vision as national statesmen.

This Jones, as his namesake and predecessor, is an able man, a tireless worker; but it is of his more spectacular colleague of whom I am writing now.

Cushman came to Washington handicapped by wide newspaper exploitation of his powers and fame. He was represented as "the Abe Lincoln of the northwest." I say handicapped advisedly, for it is a positive disadvantage in nine cases out of ten for a new representative or senator to be heralded as possessing phenomenal gifts. It raises expectation too high. He cannot generally live up to his reputation. As a rule persons who hear a famous orator for the first time are disappointed. To compare any man with Abraham Lincoln is to do him harm rather than good. Cushman suffered thereby. Until he made his celebrated speech, Jan. 10, on the river and harbor bill he had fallen below—much below—the high standard set for him by his newspaper admirers; but on that occasion he not only redeemed his fame, but augmented it and splendidly vindicated the opinion of his friends. His opportunity had come, and he seized it with a resolute hand.

He is nearly as tall as Lincoln was, nearly as lank, nearly as dark. It is no fiction to say that in personal appearance he somewhat suggests the immortal rail splitter. He also resembles Lincoln somewhat in clearness of statement and the use of humor.

Supreme Court Decision.

Columbus, O., April 22.—The Supreme Court held the act establishing the State Board of Steam Engineer Examiners to be invalid. The decision sustained the judgment of the Circuit Court of Butler county in the case of E. H. Harmon, District Deputy vs. The State, in relation to the Prosecuting Attorney.

The decision was passed upon Section 7 of the act that engineers having been in charge of engines for the three years next preceding the passage of the act, should be exempt from the examination. A law has been enacted governing the department repealing the one which the Court passed upon in this case, and which eliminates the objection to this section, and goes into effect the first day of next May. So that the department will be knocked out practically for 10 days.

In Supreme Court.

Attorneys Hunter and Kibler went to Columbus this morning to hear the case of Nelson vs. the Village of Hebron in the Supreme Court.

All Bound Over.

Harry Lamb's trial was concluded before Mayor Forry Tuesday afternoon, and Lamb was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $100 which bond he furnished.

Edward Cramer then filed an affidavit against Patsy Coyne and John Loughman, charging assault and battery. They were bound over to the grand jury each furnishing $50 bond. Lamb is charged with shooting to wound Patsy Coyne.

BE WISE TODAY! 'TIS MADNESS TO DEFER!

THE USE OF PAINE'S Celery Compound

Means Banishment of Disease and the Establishment of Strength, Vigor and Permanent Health.

Well meaning, and really worthy people often err when sickness and disease come to them. Too often they are content to follow blindly the advice of second rate physicians, who in nine cases out of every ten fail to properly diagnose the ills they are called upon to cure. Too frequently your sick people put their trust and confidence in common advertised concoctions. Terrible disappointments and results come to the users of such medicines, sickness and disease are aggravated—their dangers vastly increased.

Happy are the people who, when disease has laid its hand upon them, use Dr. Paine's Celery Compound, a medicine that stands without an equal for feeding exhausted nerves, purifying the blood, and building up the weakened and run down system.

Weakly, sickly and disease laden mortal, it is madness to deter the use of that health giving medicine that has rescued and saved its tens of thousands in every land.

Paine's Celery Compound is the one true specific recognized and prescribed today by our most eminent and our most honest practitioners for diseases arising from a debilitated nervous system. You need its use this very day; your condition demands it; common sense and a knowledge of what Paine's Celery Compound has done for others, should be your guide at this critical time of your life. PAIN'S is the kind that makes sick people well! See that the name is on both bottle and wrapper. Do not be induced to take a substitute or any imitation; you need the kind that has cured others.

WEBSTER AS A DRINKER.

The Great Orator's Deep Potations Before Two Famous Speeches.

Daniel Webster was invited to Richmond in the fifties. He accepted the invitation, came to Richmond and went to the Exchange hotel. He was invited by the state legislature to address them and the people of Richmond, and a committee consisting of James Lyons of Richmond and Robert E. Scott of Fauquier, two of the most eminent lawyers in the state, were sent down to the hotel to escort him to the capital building. They found Mr. Webster in a state of intoxication in such degree that Mr. Lyons said to Mr. Scott: "This man can't make a speech. You must take his place." Mr. Scott replied, "No man can take the place of Daniel Webster."

After delay, during which Mr. Webster improved a little, he was asked if he would go to the capital. He replied, "Yes." With great difficulty Messrs. Scott and Lyons supported and helped him to the capital. When they reached the rotunda near the Washington statue, Mr. Lyons said, "Mr. Webster, do you think you can speak?" "If you will give me a drink of brandy," yes.

A messenger was sent to a neighboring hotel and a bottle of brandy brought. Mr. Webster poured out successively two goblets full and drank them off, straightened himself up, shook himself as a lion might have done, walked steadily and spoke on the porch of the capital, and in the presence of an audience of 3,000 people, which consisted of the intelligence and beauty of Richmond, male and female, made his celebrated October speech, one of the greatest even of his life.

Edward Everett related that on the day Webster replied to Hayne of South Carolina he walked with him to the capital; that he seemed so badly prepared that he doubted him and feared that just before he rose to speak he drank a goblet of brandy and then made his great speech in reply to Hayne, which is an English classic. Such was the effect of the beverage on Webster.—Beverages.

(Original.)

When I secured a contract on one of the largest railroads in India, I took my wife and little daughter with me and established them in a bungalow on the line. I was away all day, sometimes for days together, but I left plenty of servants at the house, and felt no concern as to the safety of my family. My wife, who was troubled with insomnia, slept alone, and our little girl, seven years old, slept in a room with me. In that hot climate it is impossible to keep the doors and windows closed, and when I came in late at night I had no trouble in entering.

One night I went home and, finding the door closed, climbed into my room through an open window. As I did not care to wake Rosie, who slept in a crib in one corner, I took off my shoes before entering and stepped noiselessly. Undressing with the same caution, I got into bed and was soon asleep.

I was awakened by a low growl. Thinking that my big dog Bruin had come into the room, I was about to get up and put him out when I was startled by another growl, unlike that of a dog, but strangely resembling some one of the wild animals with which the country abounds. But what sent a thrill of horror through me was that it came from Rosie's crib.

The chamber door opened near my bed—that is, it opened toward me instead of away from me. Here was a possible exit for me, if indeed I gave up my child for lost and chose to make an attempt to save my own life. I might slip out of bed and through the door. It is said that self preservation is the first law of nature, and I confess I practically illustrated the saying. Catching sight of two glaring eyes in the corner in which the crib stood, I lost consciousness of all but one thing—my own immediate threatened death.

Springing from the bed, I pulled open the door, which fortunately stood slightly ajar, slipped through and pulled it shut behind me. At the same instant I heard the sound of a heavy body striking against it, and a terrible growl, which I now recognized as that of the man eater (the tiger) of India.

There was nothing to do but hold the door. True the tiger would not maul it, but I did not care to take even the most remote chance of letting him into that portion of the house occupied by my wife and the servants. There was a transom above, and very soon glass shattered by the tiger's paw fell on my head. Looking up, I saw his nose protruding, but fortunately the space was too small to pass him. Realizing the fact, he abandoned this point of egress, and I heard the thud of his fore paws on the floor. I expected he would go out at the window, but he did not seem inclined to do so. Hearing a step behind me, I turned, and there stood my wife in her night clothes.

"Rosie!" I moaned.

"What of her?"

Without a word the mother sank in a swoon.

Now comes a surprise in my story, for which, whenever I think of it, I lift my eyes to heaven and utter a "Thank God!" Rosie herself came running along the hallway. A few hasty questions and answers explained her presence. She had heard low growls from the tiger under the window before he entered and, terrified, fled to her mother's room and got into bed beside her without awakening her.

Then came servants, but so great is the terror of the man eater among the natives that when I explained that I had left one in my room most of them fled. My wife revived, saw her daughter and swooned again, this time through excess of joy.

One feeling now took possession of me, a desire to have the blood of the creature that had so terrified me, that might have killed my child. Directing the servants to take my wife and daughter to their sleeping room and lock them in, I called for my repeating rifle and, going into the yard, took position near the window through which the tiger had entered. There was no sign of him, and I feared he had gone, when I saw a bit of yellow fur above the window sill. It was the ridge of his back. I should have waited till he put his paws on the sill preparatory to jumping through the window, but I could not brook the delay. I called to the servants to bring me something on which to stand so that I could see into the room, but none of them dared approach. Finally one braver than the rest threw me a box. Taking it to within a few yards of the window, I mounted it in time to see the beast put his fore paws on Rosie's crib and in this elevated position stand looking about him. There was no time to spare. He would soon see me and come for me. I have never before or since known the perfect poise of nerve with which I pointed my rifle at him, aimed behind the shoulder and fired. The tiger sprang to the ceiling, then fell back dead.

What has since puzzled me are my own changes and feelings, first horror at the supposed fate of my child, next the all pervading sense of my own danger and lastly fear giving place to a desire for revenge. The most pleasurable sensation I have ever experienced was the sight of the beast springing up and falling dead. I dislike to think that at the bottom of my nature has implanted the same brutal instinct, race, as that given to the tiger. Nevertheless I have his skin, which I use for a rug and never step on it without a sensation of joy.

An April Song.

Heil me with dawning flowers Under my titill sky.

Winter the dread from the land has fled. Strengthen the earth with drying and dead Wherever his troops pass by.

Balm of my healing showers Over the land I fling: Spirit of mirth and odors of earth. Tremulous whispers of joy and birth. Deep in my garments clasp. I, who am April, sing!

Greet me with fluting voices Under my shinning sky. Summer is sweet, but her slothful feet Carry you on to a charmed retreat; Leave you to dream and die.

Life in my veins rejoices. Riotous pulse of spring! Hands that are strong and a throat for song And love exulting the whole night long—These are the gifts I bring. I, who am April, sing!—Marian West in New York News.

For some occult reason the naval appropriation bill always precipitates a savage debate in the house and arouses deep feeling. It isn't on the question of having a sufficient navy, for every body is in favor of that. The row comes over the details.

Uncle Joe Cannon's Chickens.

Uncle Joe Cannon of Illinois always stands a hand in it. He has aspirations to stand in history as a "watchdog of the treasury" side by side with the late Judge William S. Holman of Indiana. During the debate on naval appropriations in the Fifty-sixth congress Uncle Joe was running amuck on the floor when Mr. Dayton of West Virginia, a member of the naval affairs committee, suggested in a polite sort of way that Uncle Joe would know more and talk less about naval affairs if he would study the subject more profoundly. Uncle Joe retorted:

"I am chairman of a committee which has charge of the preparation of bills that run along the whole field of governmental expenditures. The committee of which the gentleman from West Virginia is a member has charge of an appropriation bill that is peculiar to the navy, and like every other specialist magnifies it and minimizes everything else. Now, the difference between my committee—and I speak respectfully of the gentleman's committee—is this: My friend before me has seen a hen with a brood of chickens, and she walks along and cucks now and then and does not utter; but when you get a hen with one chicken she runs its legs off trying to take care of it."

That happy retort placed Mr. Dayton on his feet, temporarily at least.

Uncle Joe retorted:

"I am chairman of a committee which has charge of the preparation of bills that run along the whole field of governmental expenditures. The committee of which the gentleman from West Virginia is a member has charge of an appropriation bill that is peculiar to the navy, and like every other specialist magnifies it and minimizes everything else. Now, the difference between my committee—and I speak respectfully of the gentleman's committee—is this: My friend before me has seen a hen with a brood of chickens, and she walks along and cucks now and then and does not utter; but when you get a hen with one chicken she runs its legs off trying to take care of it."

equal to the task of maintaining the conditions necessary to the transaction of business. Without some restriction upon the tendency to increase, the house will continue to grow until confusion worse confounded will bring the nation to shame and invite the "lingual curse of Babel" to put an end to the stupendous folly of attempting to legislate in a mass meeting.

"Few members of the house can be heard with distinctness in all parts of the chamber without an exertion of the vocal organs which destroys every quality of voice which makes speaking or hearing agreeable and corrupts every excellence in oratory. If it were possible for this house to vitiate the morals and principles of the people as much as it has depraved the taste and corrupted style in public speaking, I should cry out with Daniel Webster, 'God save the republic!' Much of what passes for debate is only an exchange of vociferations across the chamber. An unduly loud voice is as disagreeable to most people as it was to the sensitive Cowper, who wrote:

"Vociferated logic kills me quite:
A noisy man is always in the right.
I twist my thumbs, fall back into my chair,
Fix on the speaker a distrustful stare,
And when I think his blunders all are out,
Reply discreetly, 'To be sure; no doubt.'"

British House of Commons.

But the late Mr. Broslus' description of our house of representatives, above quoted, is quite flattering when compared with his description of the British house of commons, which runs in this wise:

"Members who receive no salary and have other business easily yield to the solicitations of interest or pleasure and remain away. When lured by the expectation of a 'scene' or brought in by the 'whips' when the 'division bell' cannot reach them, they swell the crowd, but they bring little of the element of deliberation and less acquaintance with the bearings of the legislation on hand, but much subservience to the leaders—many elements of the mob—and ready passions to be played on by the fiery orators who marshal the contending hosts, and the result is precisely what could be foreseen—excited members shake their fists in the speaker's face, disorderly calls produce an uproar which an Englishman likened to a 'cataclysm in a thunderstorm,' members usually grave shudder with boyish abandon or in a frenzy of desperation struggling to lift their voices above the tumult of noises comparable to those of a 'zoo just before feeding time,' the eloquence of honorable members seeming like a real representation of the Morse telegraphic alphabet, the alternate dot representing the utterances of one side and the alternate dash the groans of the opposition and the whole tumultuous assembly 'bedlam' more than a deliberate body of Christian statesmen."

A Mixed Metaphor.

Mr. Littlefield of Maine fought the Hopkins appropriation bill in the Fifty-sixth congress, which reduced the representation of the Pine Tree State from four to three, with the ferocity of a she bear defending her cubs. He fell about of Mr. Hopkins repeatedly and once referred to him in the following mixed metaphor: "The distinguished chairman of this committee [Mr. Hopkins] is simply a diluted extract of the aurora borealis which clings, like the shirt of Nessus, to the state of Illinois whether she will or no." That was not only a badly mixed metaphor, but a palpable hit below the belt, being a direct reference to the fiery red color of Mr. Hopkins' hair.

Truth to tell, in that debate both Littlefield and Hopkins threw the amenities to the winds and went after each other without gloves. At one point Hopkins interrupted Littlefield, whereupon the latter exclaimed, "This is not a police court." Hopkins retorted, "Well, then, the gentleman is not at home." Littlefield roared, "You would be at home on the frontier before a trial justice in the purlieus of civilization conducting your methods of discussion."

Only Playing Possum.

Mon. William L. Stark of Nebraska does not take kindly to the proposition that the Democratic party is dead. An contrary, he dissents therefrom toto callo. To illustrate his view of that theory he told this anecdote recently in a speech in the house:

"A boy asked his teacher's permission to absent himself from school to attend another boy's funeral. Permission was readily granted, and Johnny departed. But as the teacher was on her way home late that afternoon she met her absent scholar.

"And Johnny," asked the teacher, "did you attend your friend's funeral?"

"No, ma'am," replied Johnny. "I went to the house, but the boy wasn't dead. We had a high old time wrestling until he threw me flat on my back. 'F you think he's dead, you just tackle him; that's all.'"

"On His Honor."

I do not know whether Mr. Fitzgerald of Boston has read Robert Burns much, but in the debate on the naval appropriation bill in the last congress he acted on the poet's advice:

When you feel your honor grip,
Let that be your border.

Mr. Moody, now secretary of the navy, was in the chair. Fitzgerald offered an amendment to the bill which was clearly out of order. Dayton raised the point. Fitzgerald said, "Then on the point of order I suppose I may be heard, Mr. Chairman?"

Mr. Chairman Moody, evidently very friendly to Fitzgerald and not wishing to rule squarely against him, yet not desiring to hear him, replied, "If the gentleman thinks the point of order debatable, the chair will hear him with pleasure if, on his honor as a member of the house, he believes he is entitled to be heard." Being thus appealed to "on his honor," Fitzgerald declined to argue that a proposition clearly out of order was in order.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Fertilizers For Alfalfa.

J. E. O., Wilmington, O., writes: "Which is better for seeding down alfalfa in sugar tree land twice in corn, pure ground bone, medium, ammonia 1.55, 23.23 phosphoric acid, or ammonia 1.50, 7.68 available phosphoric acid, 2.71 insoluble and 8.11 potash—200 pounds per acre?"

In a general way one can use to best advantage to start alfalfa a fertilizer rich in phosphoric acid. Yet potash cells on some soils, and on some lime soils, and on all a supply of immediately available nitrogen is a great help. No one can lay down a rule for another man's soil; only I know of one safe practice, and that is to apply liberally stable manure; it never fails on alfalfa. Two hundred pounds to the acre is far too light an application if the land is really seriously deficient in fertility. When men ask me to prescribe fertilizers for alfalfa, I feel like playing "Beefsteak Mike" on them. Mike keeps his hotel and restaurant in the west. He is a genius to cook a steak. No one dreams of asking for any other meat at Mike's. When a stranger happens in, Mike, who is his own cook and waiter, goes over the familiar rigamarole, "Pork chops, lamb chops, roast beef and beefsteak." The stranger hesitates, then orders pork chops. Mike stares at him in dismay for a moment, then disappears and presently sets down in front of him a magnificent steak, done to a turn. "Eat that!" he commands. "It will be a heap better for ye!"

And never thereafter does the traveler fail to order the steak. So with alfalfa and fertilizers; stable manure will be a "heap better for ye." It adds humus as well as fertility, favors bacterial action and makes the land more porous and easier drained of excess water and more retentive of moisture during droughts. Of the mineral fertilizers wood ashes are the best that I have ever tried. Apply liberally. Lime tells on some soils, making the difference between success and failure.—Joseph E. Wing in Breeder's Gazette.

Rich Soil For Potatoes.

The potato is a gross feeder and will respond readily to liberal feeding. Keep the soil full of humus or decaying vegetable matter. Oftentimes a dressing of coarse manure or green crop plowed under or stubble and root system of a previous grass or clover crop may not of itself contain so much plant food, but the mechanical effect upon the soil, the breaking down of rocky and inert elements of nutrition in process of decomposition that have hitherto been locked up in an irresponsive and unsatisfactory soil, is oftentimes the making of a crop of potatoes, and then, while the potato does not want a wet soil, it does need a great deal of moisture during the latter period of growth, and a good supply of humus will give the soil a very much larger capacity for the storage of this moisture.

Young Stock.

Most farmers find their stock increasing in number at this season with the coming of calves, lambs, pigs and chickens. If pains have been taken to breed from good stock, each one should mean additional income to the farmer or more value to his personal property. They should therefore be welcomed on arrival, properly cared for and hospitably treated. Do not neglect to meet them until they have shivered with the cold a few hours or grown hungry, and do not fail to supply good food in proper amounts at regular intervals. That is the way welcome visitors should be received in this country.—American Cultivator.

Aspen and S. Sawberries.

We have not found wood ashes best for strawberries except on very sour or damp soil. The strawberry seems to do best on a soil that is neutral—neither very sour nor very alkaline. The ashes contain lime, which will make an ordinary soil too alkaline for the strawberries to do their best. On a very sour soil the ashes would be likely to show excellent results. From our own experience we should use them on potatoes if you are troubled with potato scab. The lime in the ashes will encourage the work of the fungus that causes this scab.—Rural New Yorker.

IT LACKED NOVELTY

A COLLECTION OF HEIRLOOMS THAT WEARIED AN OBSERVER.

The System of Renting Out Family Glory and Supplying Ancestral Trappings at So Much Per Hour Has Its Drawbacks.

Two guests were being shown through a Philadelphia mansion in which a nouveau riche broker was entertaining a party of fashionable friends. The splendid array of family heirlooms, all bespeaking a lineage of earliest colonial origin, deeply impressed one of the party. He was a stranger but lately arrived from Baltimore. Oddly enough, his companion, a Philadelphian, seemed flippantly indifferent to these treasured relics of a family's honored history.

"Remarkable collection of heirlooms our host has," remarked the stranger as he stopped before a battle scarred sword of Revolutionary days.

"Yes," drawled the Philadelphian cynically, "very interesting. But unfortunately it lacks the charm of novelty for me. Already this season I've seen the same batch of relics in three other Philadelphia houses."

"How could that be?"

"Oh, simple enough. It only means that all four families, our host and the three others I refer to, hired their ancestral trappings from the same man."

"Hired them?"

"Yes, hired them. We have in this city an enterprising collector of colonial junk who makes a business of renting out family glory to all who were unfortunate enough to be born without it."

"View?" was the only comment the astonished Baltimorean could utter.

And doubtless many Philadelphians would be moved to say "View?" if they could learn how many members of the Quaker City social elite are constrained to seek the assistance of the heirloom dealer when they wish to give a brilliant function.

It is a deception that is forced upon them, for unless you have distinguished appearing forbears you stand little chance of penetrating the sacred precincts of the local fashionable set.

Ancestry, not cash, is the open sesame, and even if a man can claim some sort of a family tree his pretensions are questioned unless he can show some of the furniture or portraits that his American forefather brought with him on the Mayflower or the Welcome.

Of course if the two vessels named had been as large as the Great Eastern and had been loaded with nothing but heirlooms they couldn't have carried half the stock needed to launch the descendants of Pilgrim fathers into society. Hence the need of an heirloom dealer.

He has his warehouses in Pine street, in a part of the city which was once the center of fashion, but is now deserted by that element in consequence of the westward movement of the city's elite.

Ostensibly he is a curio dealer, but his revenue is mainly derived from furnishing and hanging the walls of fashionable dwellings with century old portraits.

This clever manipulator of men's vanities has ancient, straight backed furniture and copper kettles and snuffers for candles and bullseye watches and similar relics of ancient grandeur, all at your disposal for a night, when you, poor fellow, with money, but no ancestors, want your friends to know what an old family yours is! He also has rare furnishings for libraries and drawing rooms which you may rent if you have the price.

It matters not from what part of the country the applicant hails or what particular descent he wishes to claim, his needs are promptly filled.

For those who wish to pose as lineal descendants of the staunch old colonial patriots who fought the stamp tax and defied the power of King George at Bunker Hill and drew up the Declaration there is especially attractive stock.

For the haughty cavalier who "came over" with Lord Delaware there are costumes and furniture and portraits of more elaborate style, as befits the past of emigrants who in England basked in the favor of the king and were participants in brilliant court ceremonies.

The Quaker City allegiance to the honored memory of William Penn is a sentiment that the curio dealer has been careful to cherish.

On his walls he has portraits of studious looking Quakers. On his shelves are modest Quaker clocks that did service in the days when the founder was exchanging thirty blankets for Philadelphia.

There are Quaker walking sticks, tinder boxes, documents on all subjects, household utensils a legion.

It is true that this system of supplying ancestors has its disadvantages. Counterparts such as the one revealed at the beginning of this article are bound to occur. The hawklike eye of a connoisseur, trained to recognize instantly the value, authenticity and history of antiques, often pierces the deception and remembers seeing the "treasured family heirlooms" somewhere else. But in the main people are gullible, and the wealthy but plebeian aspirant for social honors cannot be blind to the blueness of his blood and points with pride to his hired heirlooms without much danger of discovery.

And meanwhile the crafty Pine street dealer smiles, waxes rich and echoes a celebrated remark of Puck's regarding the average intelligence of mortals.—Philadelphia North American.

Rheumatic Warped Limbs.

To suffer the most excruciating pains, to lose the use of limbs, and to have the joints swollen and disfigured is the lot of the victim of rheumatism.

Uric acid in the blood is the cause of rheumatism. If the kidneys are active, they remove the uric acid. That is their special work. If, on the other hand, the kidneys are deranged, there is sure to be uric acid in the blood and rheumatic pain through the body.

No amount of liniment will ever cure rheumatism. It sometimes relieves, but cure can only be brought about by setting the kidneys right.

The most effective kidney remedy known to man is Dr. A. W. Chase's kidney-Liver Pills. They cure rheumatism permanently by making the kidneys active in their work of removing the uric acid from the blood.

Mr. William J. Coad, No. 65 Brunswick Street, Oswego, N. Y., writes: "I am very glad to praise Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and tell what they have done for me. I suffered for many years with severe constipation, rheumatism and kidney trouble, and could get no relief until I tried Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. In them I found immediate relief, and can honestly recommend them to other sufferers."

A CHANCE MEETING

(Original.)

Johnny Martin was a young man with a taste for adventure. His father, having tried every means known in cities to keep him in check, finally concluded to give free rein to his ambition to be tough and sent him to New Mexico.

Several years passed, and, though reports came that Johnny was making himself at home where the revolver was the only law, it did not appear that he had ever attached himself to any lawless gang. Indeed his principal amusement was in hunting out desperadoes, as gentlemanly hunters would choose the fox, and handing them over to be dealt with by the courts. As time went on Johnny's mother found it more difficult to bear the separation from her darling, and it was finally arranged that he should come home for a visit. He came, much to the surprise of his family, in a gentlemanly suit of clothes.

Now, it happened that while Johnny was at home the city was being also visited by Gentleman Jim, one of those burglars who leave facetious messages at houses they enter, planned to the curtain or a cushion. The Martins, with others, went to bed every night terrified lest the house should be entered and Mrs. Martin, who was in delicate health, be frightened to death. As to the burglary, their fears were realized. Gentleman Jim saved a hole in the back door, turned the key, shot the bolt and entered. Not finding anything of value on the lower floor, he concluded to go up stairs and inquire for the silver at the point of the pistol.

He was putting his foot on the first step of the staircase when he concluded to flash his lantern upward to see if the way was clear. The bullseye struck full in the face of Johnny Martin leaning over a corner of the banister holding a huge revolver pointed directly at the intruder.

"Put your revolver on the stairs," said Johnny in a whisper. "Don't make a noise."

Gentleman Jim was a desperate character, and he held his weapon in his right hand, but he knew that before he could raise it the man up stairs could make a hole in his brain. There was another reason for his action, which was to appear later on. He placed his revolver where he was ordered as softly as if he feared to wake the baby. Johnny, still covering him, went part way down stairs.

"Go into the dining room," he ordered in the same low voice. When they were both there, Johnny directed his visitor to light the gas, then to take off his mask. The stranger hesitated, whereupon Johnny enforced the order by raising his revolver, and the mask was removed. Johnny started.

"Well, now, I wonder if this is a miracle," he muttered. "Jim Smalls, how did you happen in this community? I thought I had you safely landed in jail in New Mexico."

"And to think that you should run up against me in this fashion! What a small world it is after all!"

"What are you going to do with me, Johnny?"

"Don't speak so loud. I wouldn't have you waken my mother for a ranch. I fancy there is a large reward offered for your capture, and as my trip to the east is expensive I suppose I might as well secure the amount. What do they offer for you, Jim? Don't lie about it. I can telegraph and find out."

"It's a big one this time—$5,000."

"Where? That is a big one. You've been working this vicinity for some time and have a lot of swag, I presume."

"A hull cellar full of silver."

"Where is the cellar?"

"Make it an object, and I'll tell."

"What object?"

"Let me off."

Johnny sat down on the arm of a chair and rested his revolver on the dining table. The weapon was heavy, and his arm was getting tired. He knew that his man was quick as a flash and, though unarmed, if given a second of time would make a dash.

"Jim," he said presently, "if it hadn't been for me, that mob would have got you."

"So they would, Johnny."

"And it would have been all over with you."

"Heckon I'd 'a' swung."

"Well, don't you think one good turn deserves another? I landed you safe in jail in spite of the mob. The silver you've got won't do you any good; better tell me where it's hid."

"Do you want both the reward and the silver?"

"I want the silver for the owners."

"Johnny, on one condition I'll go you. I've got a good wife in Arizona. She was unlucky enough to marry me, and I'd like to do nothing for her. Now, I know you, Johnny, and what you say you'll do. Give her the reward, and I'll tell all."

"Done. I'll do better than that. Promise me to go back to her and live an honest life, and you can go scot free."

The next morning Johnny Martin, while stumbling about in a cellar cumbered from an altar, came upon a silver teapot. Calling the police, a treasure was found, which was distributed among its owners.

A few years later Johnny visited the Smalls in Arizona and found Gentleman Jim earning a good living from the county hunting down desperate characters.

Johnny's mother never knew that the house had been entered, but his father did, and when Johnny returned to New Mexico it was with means to purchase a ranch. It was not long before he became a prosperous rancher and occupied several offices of great importance in the territory.

bonds over to her in the presence of Mr. Paul. The bonds were to make her future as comfortable as finances will. She promised never to tell the donor's name, according to the story, but could tell about the transaction. It was not necessary for Mrs. Fleming to receive a receipt from Mr. Paul for the bonds, which were deposited in his bank, for she had unlimited confidence in his integrity, she testified. He borrowed from her $1300 on one occasion, $5000 on another and held 200 shares of bank stock for her, according to her testimony, which she had secured for the bonds referred to. As already stated, Mrs. Fleming had great confidence in Mr. Paul, and this is the reason she assigned for not having a receipt to show that he held her securities.

While testifying regarding the marriage of Mr. Paul at a time when he was bound to Mrs. Fleming by engagement Mrs. Fleming voluntarily said Mr. Paul had told her his wife treated his children cruelly in many ways. Mrs. Fleming was asked if her confidence in Mr. Paul did not diminish when he announced that he was going to marry another woman. She said, No, that she still thought him a good man and a true friend.

Letters were introduced by Mr. Booth addressed to Mr. Paul by Mrs. Fleming in which she referred to him as "Dear Husband."

The Effect of the Fashionable Straight Front Corset.

The fashionable figure seen on profile is undeniably large, but this is due to the straight fronted corsets now so generally worn by those who dress smartly. utterly disregarded, but in spite of this colors are much to the fore, emerald green being de rigueur in Paris. Here, too, many of our smart straws are trimmed with various shades of green glaze ribbon and lilies of the valley with their own foliage. Very pretty are those toques the foundation of which is composed entirely of blue covered with a trellis work of tiny green leaves. In fact, I think we might almost say that green is the color of the moment.

There are all kinds of new straws, the prettiest being of a light, coarse make and very soft and pliable. A light hat is a necessity in these days, when many women of fashion spend the greater part of the twelve hours in their headgear. The tussan straws to wear with tailor made and country frocks are simply delightful, trimmed with loops of glaze or velvet ribbon and fantastic knots or bows.

Two Anecdotes On Fact.

Henry Loomis Nelson, in his article in the May Century, on Washington society tells these anecdotes of the capital as representative of the light and shade of official life:

"Madame," said an old diplomat at his own table, "I have some bonbons here from Paris. They have medallions of the potentates of the world, and I have had your ruler's face stamped on one of them. Is it a good likeness?" And he handed a chocolate to the woman on his right, who, for reasons of her husband's did not like the new President.

"We have no rulers in this country," said the gracious guest, throwing the chocolate under the table.

The host's attention had been attracted elsewhere and he did not see the insult, but he was made aware of something by the silence which followed. However, before he could know what had happened a young woman's voice said to the butler: "Won't you find that bonbon Mrs. C— dropped? I want to look at it."

One day a delighted and awkward new statesman was taking tea at the house of a clever woman, and was suddenly plunged into terror, agony and shame by the annihilation of the delicate and costly Sevres cup from which he had been drinking; but before his palate was dry or his tongue responsive to his scared mind, the hostess broke its mate, saying to the servant as she did so: "Never put those cups on the table again Smith; they're too brittle for use."

COOKING HINTS.

Don't salt cucumbers or eggplant before cooking. It makes them indigestible and unpalatable.

Avoid peeling rhubarb when it is young and tender, for it only needs wiping with a damp cloth before using.

A piece of tough meat can be very nicely stewed in a double boiler. It will take twice as long, however, as if cooked directly over the fire.

Fish which contain few bones may be converted into fillets by dividing the flesh from the backbone in long, wide strips and then removing any smaller bones. Soles supply the best fillets.

Crusts and crumbs of bread left over from the table should be dried, put aside for rolling and dipping or to be used in scalloped dishes or mixed with a few sliced apples and baked and served as a dinner dessert.

To prevent sausages bursting when cooking put them into a saucepan, cover them with cold water and bring this to a boil, after which take them out and fry them in the usual way. This, it is said, will not only prevent the sausages from bursting, but will improve their flavor.

Scrofula, salt rheum, erysipelas and other distressing eruptive diseases yield quickly and permanently to the cleansing, purifying power of Burdock Blood Bitters.

Something New.

Something new, something never before seen by local theatre goers. After due consultation the Local Theatrical Stage Employees Union has concluded to give theatre goers a treat, both novel and interesting. During the engagement of the "Great White Diamond" for their benefit, the sets or changes of scenery will be made in plain view of the audience. After each act the curtain will rise and the patrons can see how the "boys" have to work. Thursday, May 8, 22-4t
